

SUSPENSION OF BUSINESS.

As usual on this Anniversary, there will be a general suspension of business throughout the City. Law Courts, Banks and other public offices (except the Post-Office) will not be opened.

SERVICES WILL BE HELD IN MOST OF THE CHURCHES, on Saturday and Sunday, to make notes of the decoration, with evergreens, &c., which is getting to be quite a feature. They state, in regard to this City, that the custom has been generally observed this year as upon former occasions. In whatever manner it may have originated, and of however little consequence in a national point of view it may be, the pleasing effect of this natural and simple style of ornamentation cannot be denied. The bright green branches, festooned upon the architectural embellishments of the walls, aside from their emblematic character, are to be valued for their refreshing influence upon the minds of the church-goers. They appeal to the best emotions of the heart, by recalling scenes of home and youthfulness—sanctifying each episode by its associations, and making purer the nature susceptible of such feelings.

Churches of the Episcopal denomination were invariably decorated with "Christmas green."—Primrose, Grace, St. Paul's, St. Thomas, and many of the smaller places of worship, were tastefully ornamented—the fresh branches being hung upon the sides and columns, and arranged over the pulpits, around the communion table, and in some instances, festooned to the chandeliers, suspended through the aisles.

Many of the Catholic churches, particularly the French and German, were beautifully embellished. The chapel of St. Francis Xavier, St. Nicholas and St. Mary's, displayed a profusion of ornament—consisting of bouquets of flowers and green branches—unusually by any others which we visited. Every object seemed crowned with a garland of evergreens—and the masterly altar-pieces contrasted finely with their frames of verdure.

Nearly all the meetings-houses of other denominations of Christians were more or less decorated. The spirit of the season was typified within the walls of every temple, and was suggestive of the expression by a modern writer—"Lord, keep my memory green!"

—In Brooklyn, the "City of Churches," the Protestant Episcopal and Catholic churches are adorned with wreaths and other devices in evergreen. Many of the Sunday School Rooms are also tastefully decorated.

In the church of Rev. Dr. Peck, (Episcopal) corner of Navy and Willoughby-sts., the communion table is decorated with a festoon, and the words "Prince of Peace," above which appears a cross, and on either side a wreath of evergreen twigs and leaves. Similar ornaments were to be seen on the front and reading-desk, while the pulpit, in addition, bore the initials on the three foremost of its eight sides, "I. H. S." The center Gothic windows were wreathed all over, from the lintels to the arches. The decorations of the organ were very tasteful. A temporary arch of wood, colored brown, surmounted the front of the instrument, bearing the inscription, in purple letters, "The Star of the East," below which appeared a well-formed, five-pointed star in evergreen, the whole set off with festoons of the same.

St. Ann's Church, in Washington-st., under the pastoral charge of the Rev. Dr. Cutler; St. John's Church, Washington-st., (the Rev. Mr. Gilson); the Church of the Holy Trinity, and, in fact, all the Episcopal churches were decorated in a manner somewhat similar to the church above described.

The Roman Catholic Church of the Assumption, on the corner of York and Jay-sts., (the Rev. Dr. Bacon), was ornamented in the usual Christmas style, with wreaths of evergreens and flowers. The altar was tastefully decorated.

St. James Catholic (the Bishop's) Church, in Jay-st., was similarly decorated, with the addition of a large cross on the altar, which was tastefully ornamented with evergreen twigs and leaves. Solenn mass will be celebrated at 5 o'clock this morning, and high mass at 10 o'clock.

The churches of the Methodist denomination present the usual appearance. The Sunday Schools attached to them, however, are generally gaily set off in holiday attire. The school of the Sands St. Church is particularly fine. Over the Superintendent's desk is an arch of evergreens and flowers, with the inscription, "Welcome to our Festival." On either side are the portraits of Fathers Snow and Hurlbut, and surmounting the whole is the couplet,

"Hark! the angels sing,
"Glory to thee, O King!"

On the left wall was a fine facsimile of the old Sands St. Church worked in evergreen and laurel, and with the inscription above and below: "Old Sands-street 'Homestead.' Forsake not the old paths." Next thereto is a portrait of the Rev. Henry J. Fox, the late pastor, which is also tastefully wreathed, and the words, "Though absent, remembered still," are over and beneath it. The next object is the figure of a harp, over which is the inscription: "Each drop of dew has its commission."

On the left wall is a portrait of the Superintendent, Mr. M. F. Odell, with the inscription, "Labor here. Rest hereafter." Next is a circle of evergreens, within which is: "We love our Sabbath School." Then comes a wreath bearing the motto, "Try." Over it, "Seek the way of peace and truth;" beneath, "In the early days of youth." On the wall opposite the Superintendent's desk is the inscription, "We are glad we are in the army of the Lord," within a bower of evergreens. Taken together, the decorations present a very fine appearance, and are highly creditable to the taste and industry of the worshippers who were arranged.

The Sabbath School room of the Washington St. Methodist Church, Williamsburg, presents a neat appearance. A Christmas tree stands on each side of the Superintendent's desk. On the wall in the rear are the words "Happy Christmas." "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for such is the Kingdom of Heaven." Other appropriate inscriptions were placed about the walls of the room.

The school room of the York-st. Church is also decorated in a manner somewhat similar to the above, but without any inscription.

Sunday School exercises, peculiar to the occasion, will be held in the schools of the Fleet-st., York-st., and Sands-st. Churches.

Religious services will take place during the day in nearly all the Churches.

LEMONS ON THE ATLANTIC RAILROAD.—This business, which hardly existed before the present year, is becoming of very considerable magnitude. If prices are tolerably maintained, another year will show a large increase. Several establishments on the line of the road had just been finished in the fall, when the drought was most severe, and were unable to set at work this season, for want of water. The effect of the drought on other mills, which had been running all the season, until October, is shown by the diminution of transportation over the railroad, which, although it averaged over half a million a week in September, ran down to about 50,000 the third week in November. The next week it rose again to half a million. We have before us the weekly returns of transportation since the 1st of September, and find that the total amount of lumber transported in the thirteen weeks following, was 4,395,000 feet. Much the largest part came to this market. [Port Adm.]

MAIL TO LAKE SUPERIOR.—We have been shown a letter from Washington, under date of the 18th inst., from Hon. H. L. Stevens, in which he says: "The Department, on the morning of the 15th, put a weekly mail on the route, by the way of Green Bay, from the mouth of the Mesquimie River, to Escanaba to Marquette, on Iron Bay, on Lake Superior, and thence by the Lakes, Portage Entry, Keweenaw, &c., &c., to Ontonagon."

la belle étoile, and its mercurial motor scarcely provides it with bread only for its dogs.

Nov. 12.—Nothing remarkable occurred to-day. We had a severe frost at nightfall, and about 7 o'clock, in the midst of the storm, the besieged opened a most tremendous fire of siege artillery, field batteries and musketry. Viewed from the camp, the spectacle was truly grand and imposing. As usual, the Russians threw away their ammunition. However, a brave company of the 74th, who was at the advanced guard, disappeared from the commencement, and is supposed to have either fallen into an ambush, or been taken prisoner.

Nov. 13.—The weather on yesterday continued. The Russians, however, are indefatigable, and made all attempts against the extremities of the lines of the allied army may be repulsed without cost, as on the 3rd, so many valuable lives.

Nov. 14.—After a violent rain, a hurricane like those of the West Indian arose about 4 o'clock A. M. and all our works were suspended. We had the greatest difficulty in keeping on our legs. Our tents were carried away or destroyed. A melting snow, with compact halosides covered the ground. It was the heaviest rain of the besiegers was suspended. Everybody mustered courage to struggle against the fury of the elements. The hurstons proceeded from the southwest, and the guard of the trenches, coming to relieve those on duty during the night, were near being blown into Sevastopol. The blowing of the wind continued until 5 o'clock P. M., and only subsided during the night.

Nov. 15.—We feel like men who have escaped a disaster; our tents are being set up again. The sun has reappeared. Two days, like yesterday, would have destroyed our army and their communications. We have lost a little, but the merchants have been badly damaged. The English have lost nine vessels, thrown on the coast and we four. One of ours was laden with cattle, twenty-one horses, and six Hussars, all of whom perished. In the memory of man such a hurricane has not descended on the Crimea. The Russian troops, however, it is proved, it is the most sturdy, sturdy on the coast between Balaklava and Cape Chersonese, have been blown down. Several torpedoes of cold in the camp, and about thirty broke their fastenings and escaped in the direction of the Quarantine. The advanced posts of the two armies chased them, and on more than one occasion, a charge de Vincennes and a Cossack were running after the same horse. The works have been resumed along the whole line, and a strong wind, contrary to a few drams made by our soldiers, to dry up the trenches.

Nov. 16.—The wind still blows from the southwest, and the rain again has set in. The temperature, nevertheless, is bearable. The works of the siege are extended, but not carried forward. This kind of suspension of hostilities will no doubt assist the hospital in England and France.

Nov. 17.—The losses on the English side, since the first of the month, are estimated at 30,000 killed. The Russians also suffered in their harbor; they have set fire to one of their ships which was wrecked in the port, the light of which illuminates the coast while I am writing this letter. Most of their large buildings have been burned; their bridge boats have been taken. During the day the fire has been on the coast.

A letter from Eupatoria, of the 17th inst., says:

During the hurricane of the 15th, several vessels were thrown on the coast. Among them are the French ship Henri IV, the steam corvette Pluton, a Turkish ship, five English transports, measuring from 1,000 to 1,500 tons, and a number of smaller boats. The proximity of the enemy rendered the position of these vessels extremely critical. When they were wrecked, they found themselves between the Russians, who were only a mile or two from them, and a furious sea roaring on the beach. Fortunately the Russian gunboats were not obliged to wear a costume when they presented themselves before the Queen. According to them, it would be prejudicial to the monarchical and dynastic question to introduce such a clause in the regulations, since it would be supposing the existence of a throne. Mr. Olenga, representing the monarchical doctrine, and the Allies, his predecessor's monarchical spirit by a vote of 153 to 43. This was not yet a definitive battle, but it was probable that the struggle would soon recommence on some other article of the regulations. On that day, the union between the Eupatoriens and pure Progressives and the Republican Democrats was dissolved. Olenga, who was believed to have been toward the latter, completely repudiated the alliance.

It was hoped that the Assembly would constitute itself on the following day. As respected the organization of the new Cabinet, it was believed that the Allies would not be able to force a vote, should they not explain their views. Should it be reconstructed on the basis of the present administration, it is probable that Messrs. Allende Salazar, Alonso and Pacheco, will not be part of it. The Assembly will proceed to discuss the Budget of 1855.

The Gazette contains a royal decree extending the amnesty granted on the 7th for political offences. Lord Howden had a long conference with the President of the Council. A letter says:

On the 15th, the President of the Council, who had been at the Palace of St. James, as first Vice-President of the Council, it is stated, by the press, that the Allies would not be able to force a vote, should they not explain their views. Should it be reconstructed on the basis of the present administration, it is probable that Messrs. Allende Salazar, Alonso and Pacheco, will not be part of it. The Assembly will proceed to discuss the Budget of 1855.

CANAL TOLLS AND TRADE.

The tables of the business of the State Canals for the season have not been completed at the Department, though an estimate of the receipts has been received to enable us to estimate nearly the amount of tolls collected during the navigable season.

Various estimates have been published, predicated upon the general stagnation of business in all its branches, in which it has been claimed, and perhaps with some reason, that the receipts for the year in the receipt of tolls would be fully equal to half a million of dollars, as compared with the receipts during the season of canal navigation last year. This estimate of the dearth has been too large by nearly $75,000, as the following statement will show:

Amount collected from the opening of canal navigation, April 1st, 1854, to the 1st of January, 1855, and including the month of November of the same year:

1855, ..... 1,519,932 02
Decrease in 1855, ..... $237,295 00

The official figure will not vary materially from this estimate.

As to the down freight of the Canals during the season, we find that of articles brought in barrels, and enumerated under that head—consisting of flour, beef, pork and salt—its receipts last year exceeded those of this year by nearly 2,000,000 of barrels.

The greater proportion of this decrease is the article of flour alone. As to the articles enumerated under the head of bushels—grains generally—the excess in favor of this year by over 3,000,000 of bushels. The falling off in the receipts of wheat amounts to nearly 3,000,000 of bushels, while the excess in the receipts of corn for the year over last year amounts to 7,000,000 of bushels. Articles enumerated under the head of pounds—butter, lard, cheese, wool and bacon—show an increase this year over last of nearly 6,000,000 of pounds.

Of course, the above shows but a portion of the down freight on the canals, and affords an index of the general results of the canal trade.

The tolls received for a series of years, commencing in 1850, when they first rose to a million of dollars, have been as follows:
